VERDICT $1500 IN FLACK CASE

Jury Did not Take The Case Until Yesterday Morning.

ARGUEMENTS SATURDAY

Instructions of The Court Were For Nominal Judgment In Any Event.

The argument in the case of E. M. Flack's heirs vs. J. O. Cook, for $20,000 damages, was begun Saturday morning and went to the jury that afternoon, but the jury was allowed to disperse and did not take up a consideration of the case until yesterday morning. Judge Bush allowed each side two hours and a half. James B. Allensworth, D. P. Smith and James Breathitt, Sr., spoke for the defense and Douglas Bell and S. Y. Trimble for the plaintiffs. Judge Breathitt and S. Y. Trimble made the closing speeches in the afternoon. Much bitterness and unkind criticism of the litigants and witnesses was injected into the argument by some of the attorneys on both sides.

The jury was given the case upon the assembling of the court and at 11 o'clock brought in a verdict agreed to by all of the jury awarding $1500 damages to the plaintiff.

Whether the verdict will stand without further litigation has not been made known.

HAIG TO MAKE NEW DRIVE

Tons of Steel Hurtle Through Rain Squalls, Prefacing Another British Drive

RAILROAD TO SEA CLOSED

Next English Plunge May Break Transportation on The Ostend Lille-Line.

Through squalls of rain and under low hanging clouds Field Marshal Haig is blazing the way with his artillery for another raid into the German line in Flanders.

Since the great advance of the mid-week the British infantry has kept to the trenches and shell craters, except where forays were called for to realign the new front of counter-attacks were necessary to hold back weak German attempts to recapture lost terrain. But the big guns never ceased their activity and day in and day out great masses of steel have been blasting the German points which are mapped for capture when the drive is launched. The Germans are answering the British fire on various sectors.

Particularly heavy is the bombardment in the region running from Langemarck on the Zonnebeke, and especially to the east of the latter town where wedges of the British have been pushed in almost within striking distance of the Ostend-Lille road.

When the new offensive will be sprung cannot be predicted. Several days may elapse before Haig has sufficiently pounded the Germans to warrant sending his men across No Man's Land to the objectives assigned to them for capture, or the process of demolition already may have advanced to the point where the first grey streaks of dawn of Monday may see its commencement.

The army of the German crown prince in Champagne again has endeavored to dent the French line but again has failed with considerable loss in men killed or made prisoners. The heavy artillery duel continues along the eastern bank of the Muse river in the Verdun sector.

Comparative quiet prevails on the northern portion of the front in Russia and along this line to Rumania. In Rumania, however, the Russian in an attack northwest of the town of Sereth captured a Teutonic allied position, made prisoners of 762 men, and also took seven machine guns. Under a heavy artillery fire the Russians later were compelled to evacuate the position, having previously repulsed several enemy infantry counter-attacks.

Daily the Italians and Austrians are engaged in battles for supremacy on the slopes of Monte San Gabriele in the Gorizia sector. In the latest fight the Italians captured many positions on the northern slopes and also took prisoners. On several other sectors of this theater the Austrians have delivered attacks but everywhere they were repulsed.

Ypres Slaughter Pen.

With the British secure in all the positions they won Thursday along more than eight miles of front of the Ypres sector in Flanders, Field Marshal Haig's men were busy Friday consolidating their newly won positions and preparing for another hack into the German lines when the time becomes propitious. Nothing but the dropping of shells from German guns served to interrupt the breathing spell the British were taking, except here and there small counter attacks which lacked the usual strength the Germans employ in endeavoring to regain lost ground. In addition to the enormous casualties inflicted on the Germans, the British captured 4,446 prisoners in Thursday's attacks, among them 114 officers. Not only have the British wrenched away many vital strongholds, but they have inflicted almost unprecedented casualties on the enemy. As the attacking troops went out in quest of great adventure over the mist-shrouded slopes the vast protective artillery barrage caught in its merciless swirl large numbers of the enemy, who, by coincidence also, had been massing for an early morning attack along a wide front extending from the neighborhood of Zonebeck to the Polygood wood. Some five divisions of German troops were actively involved, three of these having been hurriedly rushed up in reserve in order to support their comrades in the front lines when the German attack should begin. A solid wall of breaking shells plowed through them in a hurricane of death and they lie in countless thousands amid the devastation that the barrage left in its wake. Part of these ill-fated troops were the famous guardsmen in whom the German emperor had taken such pride in the days gone by. But these massed troops were not the only ones to suffer, for reports from prisoners all along the line indicate that the Germans lost heavily throughout the territory involved. At many places Germans ran in terror or were captured in large numbers as the British attack began. All day streams of broken prisoners continued pouring into the British cages in the rear. Perhaps half of them were wounded, some blinded and some with shattered limbs, a pitiful sight even to those hardened to such scenes.

Soldiers Can Keep Cow.

Washington, Oct. 5.—Soldiers in the American army not only may keep a cow, but they can feed it at the government's expense, provided they consume the milk, says a ruling of the Judge Advocate General. The decision was rendered on the question of whether feed for a cow kept by a detachment of soldiers for the production of milk for the detachment mess could legally be purchased from the ration savings in view of the regulation that "such savings shall be used solely for the purchase of articles of food."

Compensation Allowed.

The presumption that a wife is dependent wholly on her husband applies only when an accident happens to the husband, the Workmen's Compensation Board decided in the case of Rosa French Dittus against the Andrews Steel Company, of Newport, in which the board allowed Mrs. Dittus compensation for the death of her son by a former husband, Thruston French.

The boy contributed to the support of the family, even after his mother married again, and up to the time of his death, June 14. Mrs. Dittus was allowed $3 weekly for 335 weeks.

Losses Again Drop.

The record for shipping losses by submarines in any one week since unrestricted warfare was resumed was again lowered last week when only 11 vessels of more than 1,000 tons were destroyed. The previous record was 15 vessels of more than 1,000 tons. It is officially announced that accurate figures compiled show that actual losses are less than two-thirds of the German claim of 900,000 tons a month since resumption of the unrestricted use of the submarine.

KEPT HER AWAKE

The Terrible Pains in Back and Sides. Cardui Gave Relief.

Marksville, La.—Mrs. Alice Johnson, of this place, writes: "For one year I suffered with an awful misery in my back and sides. My left side was hurting me all the time. The misery was something awful."

I could not do anything, not even sleep at night. It kept me awake most of the night. I took different medicines, but nothing did me any good or relieved me until I took Cardui.

I was not able to do any of my work for one year and I got worse all the time, was confined to my bed off and on. I got so bad with my back that when I stooped down I was not able to straighten up again. I decided I would try Cardui. By time I had taken the entire bottle I was feeling pretty good and could straighten up and my pains were nearly all gone.

I shall always praise Cardui. I continued taking it until I was strong and well. If you suffer from pains due to female complaints, Cardui may be just what you need. Thousands of women who once suffered in this way now praise Cardui for their present good health. Give it a trial. NC-133

Annual Tug of War.

The University of Kentucky announces that the annual tug of war between the freshmen and sophomore classes will take place October 12. It takes the place of the old-time flag-raising in settling the question of supremacy, and is held under the auspices of the faculty. The change was made because of the number formerly injured in the flag-raising enthusiasm. One hundred and seventy-four freshmen will pull against 109 sophomores this year.

ROAD BUILDING HINTS GIVEN

Military Attaches With Former Premier Balfour of England, Impart Information.

Some interesting information regarding military road building was given to the United States when the English mission headed by former Premier Balfour arrived in New York. Military attaches told how the armies of France and Great Britain rebuilt roads in France and Belgium.

English military engineers recently have made experiments demonstrating that it is possible and desirable to build the highest types of road surfaces for the temporary or emergency movement of artillery and supplies. Roads built with asphalt sent from England have been constructed in the rear of the Franco-Belgian front. Roads so improved gave better service than any type attempted under the swift and heavy movement necessitated by the artillery action which precedes infantry attacks. It was observed that motortrucks and gun carriages suffered no injury in movement over these hastily constructed pavements, while frequent breakdowns were experienced when road building was not attempted.

Following those experiments a mission, including officers of the British and French engineer corps, looked over the pavements in the environs of Paris built in the last three or four years. Among other roads inspected was the asphalt pavement laid on the road to Versailles, which has been carrying heavy military traffic ever since the war started. As a result of these experiments and investigations it has been decided, wherever possible, to construct similar surfaces for the movement of military traffic in regions where roads have been destroyed or where they may be made necessary by battle plans.

PLAN OF MAIN TRUNK LINES

California Is Spending $18,000,000 on
Two Chief Highways From Oregon to Mexico.

John A. Wilson, president of the American Automobile association, says of the federal good roads law recently passed.

"Thirty-four states have now outlined in some form a system of main trunk lines, which is now an augury for the success of the federal-aid plan just inaugurated. In this connection it is worthy to note that California was the first state to apply for its apportionment of the money, and California is expending $18,000,000 on two main highways extending from the Oregon to the Mexican line. It should be kept in mind that an application for federal aid in the improvement of any road must be made by the highway department of the state. Consequently if anybody in the state desires to have a road improved at the aid of federal funds it is necessary that the matter be taken up with the state highway department and not with the federal government."

Good Road in California.

BUILDING GOOD EARTH ROADS

Can Be Constructed at Low Cost, but They Require Constant and Costly Attention.

Good earth roads can be constructed at a very low cost; however, they require constant maintenance, which may be expensive where the travel is heavy. A well-built and properly maintained earth road will serve some sections as well as the most expensive types of hard-surfaced roads will serve other sections. Where this fact is realized more attention will be paid to earth roads, and the money spent on them will not be regarded as lost.

"Sweet Smelling Nails."

According to Sir George Watt, the name "clove" denotes its resemblance to a nail (clavus). There seems no doubt, he says, that the Chinese procured the clove from its island home, the Moluccas, or Spice Islands, for several centuries before it reached Europe; there are records that point to this traffic as early as 200 B. C. The clove was not regarded by the inhabitants of the Spice Islands as of any value until the Chinese desired to be supplied with "little sweet-smelling nails." In that circumstance alone lay the interest taken by the people of the Moluccas in the plant, and "nail" or "clove" became its name in most countries.

MONEY

In every community there is enough money in hiding to start a respectable bank.

This money is not only liable to be lost by theft or fire, but it is placed where it does not bring in any income to the holder--neither is it of any use to the public.

Deposit this "dead" money with us. Then it will get into circulation and be of some benefit to yourself and also to the community.

The more money there is in circulation, the cheaper the rate of interest; the easier it is to borrow, and the more prosperous the general business conditions.

GEORGIAN SILVER

By LOUISE OLIVER.

Alex looked down at the little girl beside him with a calm, quiet scrutiny which might have conveyed a diversity of impressions upon any who noticed.
But for the enlightenment of the few who knew not Alex, I shall explain that he was quietest when most delighted, and he was indeed thankful to his hostess for putting him beside this sweet little violet of humanity.

He drew a long breath and waited for her to speak. He didn't know the girl and he hoped she didn't know him.
Otherwise she might be like the others; overtalkative, unnatural, and apt to overdo. He was too modest to appreciate the fact that, as the best catch in the matrimonial sea, he was apt to be offered bait in generous quantities and of infinite variety.

Dorothy looked around the dining room with wide eyes, then up at him with a smile. "I can't believe I'm awake," she said.

"No?" It was an invitation to go on.

"No. They say that sometimes a wish is father to a thought. Maybe I've just wished for something like this so often that now I think it's true.
Maybe I'm not here at all—only thinking I am."

"What does it matter? Maybe I'm thinking all this too."

"I was just thinking," she remarked in the interval before the soup. "that it's a shame Bob couldn't be here. He'd love it so. But Aunt Jane said he couldn't come, that's all there was to
it. Aunt Jane said it was kind of Mrs.
Dexter to ask one of the poor Virginia relations without ringing in the three of us. You see there's Robert, Stonewall and myself. The boys are dears; you ought to know them. Bob's my twin."

"He must be a dear," ventured Alex.
She laughed, but colored nevertheless.

He changed the subject. "Are you fond of old silver?" he asked. "I've been admiring those Georgian candlesticks. The pattern is very rare."

"I've been collecting bits here and there," he went on. "No doubt you can tell me some wonderful things about old silver. Most Southerners can. But one thing I have discovered for myself, that Southerners may part with their homes, their clothes, and even their souls, but their silver—never. I know where there are some splendid collections in the South, but you can't get them."

Dorothy's appetite for food suddenly disappeared. She laid down her fork and looked so distressed that Alex wondered what dreadful thing he had said.

"I want to—tell you," said the girl finally, "where I happen to know you may find a beautiful collection of Georgian silver. It is at Berni's, on Fifth avenue. It all came from one family, and it seems to me the things ought to stay together." Then suddenly and brightly, as if to put a distasteful thought behind her, "I wish you could know Wally and Bob. Poor Bob!"

"Why poor?"
"Oh, he loves nice things so. We all do! But I really meant it literally, you know. We are poor, very. You see that's why I'm—" She stopped.
Virginia pride was uppermost. "Nothing," she answered his eager inquiry.
"I thought I could tell you, but I can't."

A painful flush had spread over her face, and Alex had an uncomfortable feeling that tears were near. Something was giving this little girl a great deal of unhappiness, he had discovered, and suddenly he had a desire to chase the clouds away from the serious dark eyes, and to see the dimple come and go in her lovely, smooth cheek.

The next day he stopped in Berni's.
And there was Dorothy herself, hatless, coatless and in the plain black garb of a clerk. She colored furiously, when she saw him.

Alex was puzzled. Was the story of Virginia, then, merely a happy fiction, manufactured to entertain a dinner partner? If so, it was good. "Good afternoon," he said; "I understand there was a fine collection of old Georgian silver here. May I see it?"

"Certainly!" Dorothy led the way to a table on which was an array that made Alex fairly jump with astonishment.

"It's splendid!" he cried. "Whose was it? Where did it come from? I never saw anything like it."

"The silver is mine—all I have. But the boys must go to school, and it must go. I won't let anyone else sell it. That was one stipulation I made to Berni, that I must approve the purchaser. When anyone else comes along, I double-treble the price."

"But I must have it! Do you approve of me?"
She nodded.

"But the collection isn't complete.
There is something else that will have to go with it before I take it."

"What is that?"
"You. I always know what I want instantly, and I could have told you that last night. You're the loveliest girl I've ever known." He reached for her hand.

Dorothy did not draw it away, but instead a deep, steady light dawned in her eyes and the dimple Alex so longed to see appeared in her cheek.

"I wonder if this is really true, or if I'm just thinking it is," she said.

"I hope it's true for us both," he whispered.

Washington, Oct. 8.—A notice to the public to make its tax returns to the government under the new war revenue legislation was issued last night by Internal Revenue Commissioner Roper in an interpretative statement of the law's operation.

Warning was given that in no case would the government take the initiative in getting returns although all returns would be verified and that everyone concerned should communicate promptly with the nearest revenue officer. Persons failing to make returns, he announced, would be regarded as tax slackers, and the penalties would be enforced against them.

As outlined in the statement, the following persons affected must make returns to the government:

"All corporations, joint stock companies, and associations.

"All distillers, rectifiers, wholesalers, retailers, holders of distilled spirits intended for sale or use for manufacturing purposes.

The general's wife pleaded that if he were sent to Siberia an attempt might be made to murder him.

SERVING THE COLORS. STUCK.

I'm stuck! They've got my number, bo.

I guess it's up to me to go. That little capsule says "Fall in! We've got a man's size fight to win!" I felt it comin'; had a hunch. But say, if you could only see how big that number looked to me when first the figures caught my eye—

Believe me, they were two feet high! Excited some? At first, well, yes; It kind o' got my goat I guess.

Of course, I thought of mother first—That's where it hits a fellow worst. And then—I never told you this—But there's a girl I'll sort o' miss. And then somehow I thought of Dad. And when he was a husky lad. I know they hate to see me go; They think a lot of me—but, bo, They'd never lift their heads or speak if I should show a yellow streak.

The Girl? If she's the kind worth while She'll weep a little bit—then smile And bid me godspeed to the fight Like I was some old fashioned knight, Exemption? Cut the kidding, bo; A half a million's GOT to go, They're got my number, got it fair, And I'm the boy to do my share. Say, where's that little book of French? It may come in handy in a trench.

Attacked Five White Women.

St. Louis, Oct. 8.—Edward Wilson, a negro, who in the last week attacked five white women in revenge, he said, for the death of relatives killed in the riots, in East St. Louis, Ill., July 2, was shot and killed on the street here last night by Joseph Cipolli, the escort of a girl he insulted last Sunday night.

Cipolli, with the aid of two friends and the police, laid a trap for the negro, and enticed him into an automobile. He became suspicious when the men drove toward the police station and jumped from the car. Cipolli drew a revolver and shot the negro five times as he ran. He fell dead.

THE RED CROSS.

It was as late as 1859 that Henri Dunant, a Swiss tourist, witnessed the sufferings of thirty thousand French, Italians and Austrians, as they lay wounded on the battlefield of Solferino for days, uncared for. Haunted by the memory of the neglected horrors of this field of blood, he felt that the world must know what he had seen, and he wrote a tract, the Souvenir of Solferino.

The ghastly pages of this pamphlet aroused intense interest all over Europe, and as a direct result, in 1864 fourteen nations sent delegates to a conference held at Geneva, for the purpose of discussing some method of caring for the sick and wounded in time of war. Up to this time, such a thing as a trained nurse never had been heard of, and organized and efficient care of wounded men was unknown; it was all left to chance and to any unskilled, amateur effort that might be at hand. One can scarcely realize that this simple, Christian idea of practical help is only about fifty years old, and that it took humanity nearly two thousand years to wake up to the necessity for such an organization. The aftermath of all the battles of history, from Hastings to Gettysburg, have sent out their pitiful call, but it seems that Dunant was the first to hear and heed. The result of this meeting at Geneva was the signing of a treaty by the fourteen nations to be known as the Red Cross Treaty, in which it was set forth each nation should extend its sanction, authority and protection, to this volunteer relief organization in times of war; and that all doctors, nurses, ambulances and hospitals, be accorded the privileges of neutrals. And as a delicate compliment to Switzerland, as the birthplace of the idea, the cross from the Swiss flag was adopted as the universal insignia of the order. The color of the cross was changed from white to red. To-day all over the civilized world, the simple red cross on a field of white stands for organized human help and sympathy, a sympathy that knows no creed, class, or nationality. The story of the Red Cross is the story of earthquakes, famines, floods, and fires, as well as of wars.

Wherever help is needed, the Red Cross stands ready with money and trained men and women to succor and relieve. The Red Cross took root slowly in this country, and it was not until 1881 that it gained sufficient momentum to push forward and demand a place alongside of other great national movements. That year it was incorporated under the name of The American Association of the Red Cross. The United States did not sign the Geneva Treaty until 1882; and it was years later before the government took cognizance of the scope and value of the organization. About this time the name was changed to the American Red Cross. It is now closely allied with the great branches of the government. The President of the United States is its official head, the Army and the Navy are represented on its board, while its finances are audited by the War Department. This trained department also assists in the distribution of its bounty. It is the only officially authorized channel through which succor can flow for the relief of any great disaster. So if you have a heart that is touched by suffering and you feel that you would like to do your part you can do it best through the Red Cross. You can help by adding your name to the roll, and by giving your one dollar, or two dollars, as annual or subscribing member.

Everyone, male or female, young or old, is eligible for membership; all you have to do is to send in your name and dues, to feel that you have a part in this great work of lessening human suffering. The American Red Cross now numbers something over three hundred thousand members, but needs a million. In Japan every twenty-third person is a member of the Japanese Red Cross; in Germany one out of forty belongs to the German Red Cross, while in this country, only one in every two hundred and ninety-one persons are entitled to wear a Red Cross button.—Forward.

Seeadler Stranded.

The German raider, Seeadler, has been heard from in the Southern Pacific, having been stranded after sinking three American ships, on Mophea island, August 2. On August 21 her commanding officer with three other officers and two men set out in a motor sloop provided with machine guns, rifles, bombs and two months' supplies. On Sept. 5, the remainder of the Germans seized the French schooner Lutec, armed her and put to sea. Twenty-seven white and 17 native prisoners from the Seeadler were left marooned on the island, and the Slade's master brought word that they were in great need of food and water. The American vessels sunk were the Slade, the A. B. Johnson and the Manila.

Post This Bodyguard Around Your Children

You Can Keep Them Free from Colds Without Dosing.

These two fine boys have a "Little Bodyguard" to protect them against sudden attacks of croup or cold troubles. Their mother Mrs. C. C. Evinger, 1224 N. 6th St., Terre Haute, Ind., writes—

"I have tried your Vick's VapoRub on my two boys (who are nineteen months and three and one-half years old respectively), and have found it very satisfactory when they had the croup. The first application helped to loosen the phlegm, making them rest more easily, and they were able to go to sleep. VapoRub also helped them when they had severe colds. I can recommend it to all mothers."

But the best part about this "Little Bodyguard"—VapoRub, is that it is applied externally and hence can be used freely, with perfect safety, on the smallest child, as often as wished. Three size, 25c, 50c or $1.00.

ROMANS ANCIENT AND MODERN

What They Did of Old and Are Doing Now.—Cadorna on the Job.

Gen. Cadorna is a warrior whose name will occupy a proud place in history and whose military genius has won for him a commanding place among the great soldiers of the world war. He does not employ a publicity agent nor is he familiar with the typewriter or its peculiar workings. If he were, perhaps voluminous reports or accounts of his achievements would be spread broadcast the world over.

Should Italy be supplied with coal and steel this winter her 4,000,000 soldiers will be ready for the great offensive in the spring of 1918. Italy has many old scores to pay.

Italy and Austria are implacable foes.

For centuries the house of Hapsburg has oppressed these modern Romans, robbed them of their territory, murdered their patriots, dungeoned their would-be liberators and made life a hell for the conquered provinces.

Cadorna and his men, once they are over the Alps, are as certain to march to Vienna as day follows night.

Then the line of communication will be severed. Germany will be cut off from her allies and the house of Hohenzollern and its armed defenders will be at the mercy of the Entente Powers and the United States. Then thousands of airplanes will comb the Keil Canal, the military camps of Germany, bases of supplies, Krupp gun works, and the magnificent cities of the Fatherland, which in this good hour have escaped the horrors and miseries of war.

Great were the Caesars of ancient Rome.

Warriors and builders and statesmen and scientists, they gave to the world the civilization of letters and the civilization of arts. Greater will be the modern Romans should Cadorna march his men to the imperial city of the Hapsburgs and compel the abdication of Emperor Karl and the disarmament of his soldiers.

This is a miracle-making age and the decisive battle of the world war may be fought by these conquerors of the Alps in the heart of Middle Europe, and not on the western front.

CITY TAXES

Under Section 3400 of the Kentucky Statutes, interest at the rate of eight per centum per annum is now being added to all unpaid city taxes.

This interest has been running since October 1, 1917, on taxes for the year 1917, and if said taxes are paid now very little interest will have to be paid. On all city taxes for the year 1917, which remain unpaid on the first day of December, 1917, an additional penalty of 6 per centum will be added.

The city officials have no desire to inflict the payment of interest and penalties on the tax payers, but the law makes it my duty to collect the interest and penalty above mentioned if taxes are not paid before the dates on which said interest and penalty, under the law, are added.

Persons, firms and corporations who have not paid their city taxes are requested to settle same now and thereby escape the payment of future interest and penalty.

This October 8th, 1917.

Commissioner of Finance City of Hopkinsville, Ky.

REAL WILD WEST

One of the genuine novelties offered by the Carl Hagenbeck-Wallace Circus this season is its genuine and historically correct Wild West and Cheyenne Frontier Exhibition, participated in by sixty cowboys and cowgirls from the Far West. When the parents of the present generation were boys and girls, there lived on the Western plains a great body of hardy heroes who acted as guardians over herds of cattle that roamed over the trackless plains. The cowboys are fast disappearing before the wake of the settling and cultivation of the Western plains.

When the Carl Hagenbeck-Wallace Circus exhibits in Hopkinsville on Wednesday, Oct. 17, a real Wild West show will be staged among the numbers. Assembled for this exhibition are the champion ropers, broncho busters, cowboys and cowgirls from Montana, Wyoming, Idaho, Texas, Oklahoma and far Western Canada. They represent the experts among the different lines exploited by the cowboy in his work and pastime. The "Pony Express," illustrating how the U. S. mail was delivered in the West before the advent of the railroad, will be one of the interesting exhibitions.

In this the rider dismounts from his horse while the animal is running at full speed, runs and mounts a fresher horse. The animal is trained to dash away at full speed without any delay to the rider and the mail. Trick riding follows, introducing Chester Byers, acknowledged by all Western frontier exhibitions to be the greatest cowboy of this generation. Mr. Byers holds medals from the Pendleton (Ore.) Round Up, the Cheyenne (Wyo.) Frontier Exhibition, the Calgary (Alberta) Wild West Exhibition and the Walla Walla (Wash.) Plainsmen's Exhibition. At every exhibition Mr. Byers rides a silver mounted and diamond studded $1,000 saddle, a prize won last year at the Pendleton Round-Up. While fresh bucking horses are continually used in the Wild West exhibitions, yet all owners of bad and outlaw horses are invited to bring them to town circus day that they be ridden by the Hagenbeck-Wallace champion cowboys and cowgirls. The wilder the horses are, the better they are liked by the Wild West performers.

The Carl Hagenbeck-Wallace Shows travel this season aboard three special trains, the longest ever used to transport a circus organization.

The PERUNA Family

has three members you should know if you desire to enjoy life.

1. The popular liquid form of Peruna—the reliable tonic of the American household, with a long history of success in treating all catarrhal difficulties.
2. The tablet form, which is made after the same formula and is more convenient for many.
3. Manalin, the ideal laxative, by the regular use of which constipation may be overcome and natural action restored. Manalin has no habit-forming drug, but is an aid to nature.

Your druggist has all three. So many thousands have received benefit from the use of one or both these remedies that they are a recognized part of the equipment of every careful household.

cial trains, the longest ever used to transport a circus organization. There are in the neighborhood of 1,000 people traveling along with the show, in addition to 108 advance men. Six hundred draft horses, 125 head of fleet-footed ring stock, 400 trained wild animals and three herds of elephants are a part of the great organization: Twenty-two tents, which cover fourteen acres of ground, are used to house the show in the daytime.

The doors of the Carl Hagenbeck zoological paradise are opened daily at 1 and 7 p. m. An operatic concert by Prof. Fred Jewell's band of 45 soloists lasts thirty minutes and cedes the performances, which begin at 2 and 8 p. m. A three-mile-long gala, golden street parade will be seen at 10 a. m. on the day of exhibition.

Eat Slowly.

Food eaten slowly and mixed with saliva is quickly made into rich blood and tissues. If swallowed, it lies fermenting, a vile—unspeakably vile—mass of poison, causing pain and illness. Let's take more time and know the joy which comes with bounding good health. Stop eating when appetite is satisfied. We need but little if we eat slowly—taste.—Exchange.

Mirrors of Twelfth Century.

From the twelfth to the fifteenth century small mirrors, carried in the pocket, or attached to the girdle, were regarded as indispensable adjuncts to ladies' toilets. The pocket mirror was a circular plaque of polished metal fixed in a shallow box and covered with a lid.

Temple of Solomon.

The Temple of Solomon was begun in the fourth year of his reign (B. C. 1012), and completed seven years later. The whole area was inclosed by the outer walls and formed a square of about 600 feet. The front of the porch was supported by two great brazen pillars. One of these was called Jachin and the other Boaz.

CUPID'S NEW WEAPON

By LOIS CRAYTON.

All day he had watched her on the trail as the horses wound around high, rocky cliffs, across tracts of shale and through deep valleys. Hedgeman, the leader, who knew the country well, went ahead; then came the venture-some spirits, ready to take risks of slides and places on narrow ledges, where pieces of rock might have fallen away since the last ranger passed on his lonely patrol.

But the mountain ponies were sure-footed—too sure-footed, for they went close to the edge sometimes. The horse the girl rode insisted on walking as far away from the cliff as possible.

The man kept his eye on the girl. Most of the time her left foot was dangling over space, but she gave no sign that she was afraid.

When night came they camped in a valley, and after supper most of the weary souls crawled into bed. A few still lingered, however, around the great fire. The man and the girl sat apart talking.

"You are not afraid of anything, are you?" he said.

She laughed. "Goodness, yes—spiders and mice, measles and burglars."

"I doubt it!"

"What did I do to make you think I was—brave?"

"Most girls would have screamed or fainted when that horse went so close to the edge."

"And I kept quiet. That was only the instinct of self-preservation. I didn't want to scare him."

"That isn't true, I'm afraid. I insist on giving you the palm of courage."

"And I insist that I am as much of a coward as anybody."

"What are you afraid of, then?"

"I told you—burglars for one thing."

"And?"

"You for another."

"Me?"

"Yes. You insist on dragging my fallings out into daylight and analyzing them. I suppose you'll soon discover that I'm fond of vegetable soup and hate to use semicolons, and that incidentally these riding boots have rubbed my stockings into tatters."

"I'd forgotten. You must be dead tired." He got up instantly and helped her to her feet. "Go to bed now and be fresh for new worlds tomorrow."

He pressed her hand warmly and was gone.

They were together a great deal after that; they rode side by side when possible, sat together at meals, and had splendid campfire talks. He insisted on calling her brave as each day brought new risks which she took without flinching.

The trip came to an end; the man took train for Seattle, the girl went east, and the party scattered in all directions.

The girl's family had not come home from Canada and she undertook the opening of the townhouse.

She had long, quiet evenings alone after busy days, and she lived over her wonderful time in the mountains. There were camera views to go over, some of the man. "He's so different from most men," she mused, "so big. He's been all over the world, he says. I suppose he builds bridges and tunnels mountains and constructs dams and aqueducts, for he would never be content to spend his time doing little things."

One evening, after looking through her travel book again, she decided to go to bed. Hulda, the cook, had gone to her room on the third floor, and she was alone. She made a round of the rooms, fastened windows, snapping on locks and turning out lights.

Then she returned to the library to switch off the table light before going upstairs.

And there stood a man with a black mask over his face and an automatic ready for action.

"Oh!" said the girl, standing quite still.

"Keep quiet," said the intruder, "and I won't hurt you."

And the girl kept very quiet; in truth, she slipped in a heap to the floor, for she had fainted.

"I'm a fool!" A man's voice was the first thing she heard when her senses came back. She was on a couch and Hulda was rubbing her face and hands. She thought she knew the voice.

The girl sat up. "You!" she cried.

"Yes, I!" said the man grimly, the man with whom she had traveled over 800 miles of mountains.

"And here I've been thinking you did big, wonderful things to help the world, and you're a—"

"A burglar? No, I'm not really. Listen. I just got back from the West today—this evening—and I couldn't go to sleep until I had located your house. It was too late to come in, but I just wanted to know where you lived. When I was passing I saw a man working at the side window, so I got the corner policeman and we nabbed him. Then I thought of something, just a fool notion of mine to test your courage further, for I didn't believe you when you said you were afraid of burglars. You know what it was. I played burglar. Forgive me!"

"And I played baby," she said, ashamed.

"You are adorable, and I love you," said the man.

"Then it's all right," sighed the girl happily, "but it's the first time I ever knew Cupid to use a gun."

HOME-GROWN SEED IS THE SUREST AND BEST SELECT SEED CORN

ENOUGH FOR TWO YEARS

For 1918 Plantings and to Insure Adapted Seed for 1919

WHERE?

In the field from standing stalks of a variety that has "made good" and become locally adapted.

HOW?

Pick best ears from plants showing best yields in fair competition with neighboring plants. Storm-proof plants with hanging ears give best seed. Long ears with large, uniform kernels are the best. Avoid sappy ears heavy with water.

Insure a Right Start for Your Next Two Corn Crops by Saving Ample Seed Now

For Further Information Ask Your County Agent, or Write for Farmers' Bulletin 415, "Seed Corn"
U. S. DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE,
Washington, D. C.

WHEN?

As soon as ears are ripe and hard—before heavy frosts or autumn rains injure the kernels for seed. The day the ears are selected they should be hung where they will become thoroughly dry in a few days.

WHY?

It pays. Field selection of seed corn is one of the surest and best paying operations on the farm. Proper care of seed corn pays well. Tests show that properly cared for seed corn has yielded eighteen bushels more per acre than crib-stored seed from the same field.

Cat Domesticated Ages Ago.
The cat was domesticated among the Egyptians at least 1,800 years before Christ, and it was dignified by them with a titular deity. Since then it has appeared in all parts of the world as a pet. During the middle ages a superstition was attributed to the cat, many persons believed cats to be the reincarnation of evil spirits. Modern science gives it an equally bad character, though of a different sort, and says that the cat must go.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

WHOOPIING CRANE.

"I am the most beautiful crane to be found in these parts," said the Whooping Crane. "I am very fine to look at."

"As far as that is concerned," said the little Brown Crane, "you might say that in many places and it wouldn't mean anything."

"Whatever do you mean?" asked the Whooping Crane, shrieking loudly.

"I mean," said Mr. Brown Crane, "that if you only get yourself into a small enough part you can always say you are the most beautiful. For instance I could stand off by myself and I could say,

"Behold! I am the most beautiful Brown Crane to be seen for miles! And the truth might be that there was not another brown crane to be seen for miles, so naturally I was the most beautiful."

"But I didn't say I was merely the most beautiful Whooping Crane, I said I was the most beautiful crane—meaning you, the demoiselle cranes, the sandhill cranes, the Asiatic white cranes. You know they come from a country they call Asia, and the demoiselle—the small crane—comes from a country named Africa."

"Yes," said the Brown Crane, "you are the most beautiful around these parts. But you couldn't compare yourself with the paradise crane or the crowned crane for instance. Just suppose you had a beautiful feathery crown on your head! Wouldn't that make you proud?"

"I'm proud of my own white feathers, my black legs and beak. My wing feathers are particularly lovely, and I am quite a rare bird, too. Ah, I don't make myself common like the sparrows. When I am seen it is a treat."

"You like yourself pretty well," said Mr. Brown Crane, "don't you?"

"I must admit I do," said the Whooping Crane. "I can't help it. My feathers are so white and lovely and I am so very large."

"It's just as well you admit it," said the Brown Crane, "for when a creature has boasted as much as you have it would be foolish to say you didn't think well of yourself."

"Of course it would," said the Whooping Crane. And then he gave a great and terrific call.

"I never knew you had such a voice," said the Brown Crane.

"Ah, isn't it noble and lovely? I could be a king with such a great and commanding voice as I have. Yes, I could be called King Whooping Crane. Of course I never am called that, but then I take pleasure in knowing that I could be called by such an honorable name."

"I'm Proud of My White Feathers."

"You know, Whoopy," said Mr. Brown Crane, "that I didn't say I thought your voice was lovely." The Brown Crane grinned as he thought how brave he had been to call the whooping crane, Whoopy, just after he had said he could be called King.

"What do you think?" asked Mr. Whooping Crane, with his voice becoming louder and louder.

"I said and I think the same," said Mr. Brown Crane. "I said that I never knew you had such a voice. I meant such a loud voice. Why you could be heard almost a mile off."

"I could indeed," said Mr. Whooping Crane.

"I know," said Mr. Brown Crane, after a moment.

"What do you know?" asked Mr. Whooping Crane. "I wouldn't say you knew much to hear you talk. You don't even know enough to appreciate a glorious voice."

"You mean a good, loud voice," said Mr. Brown Crane. "I won't fight with you, though. I will merely say that now I know why you are called the Whooping Crane."

"Oh, you do, eh?" asked Mr. Whooping Crane. "Tell me what you know and I will tell you if you know anything correctly."

"You are called the whooping crane because of your loud voice which can be heard such a distance away. It sounds like a whoop—a regular whoop—and so you have that name."

"For once you are right," said Mr. Whooping Crane. "I am glad to see you do know something. It is a great joy to me that I both have a voice and beauty."

"You have a voice, oh yes," said Mr. Brown Crane, "but I would rather no one asked me what kind of a voice."

Mr. Whooping Crane did not notice this remark but continued talking about himself and telling how far, far south he went in the winter, and how in the summer he went to the Arctic region.

JUST FOR A LARK

By C. B. LEWIS.

Miss Geraldine Langton was a daughter of a very rich widow, living in a suburb of New York, and she had arrived at the age of twenty. Here was an intelligent, educated and good looking girl of twenty who had never had a real beau. Yes, she had wondered what kept the young men away. Was it her mother's wealth? Was it that they had heard she was extravagant in her dress, and knew nothing whatever about managing a house? Miss Geraldine thought and thought, but she could not solve the problem. Neither could her mother, though the latter didn't try very hard. Whenever she thought about it, she said to herself:

"Oh, Geraldine is all right. She wants her freedom for a while yet. The right young man will come along some day, and she will have her bridal tour and her happy home. I don't believe she would marry now, anyhow, and, as long as she isn't worried about it there's no occasion for me to fret."

One day Miss Geraldine had to go to the city to do some shopping. She went alone very often and she knew her way about. She never mistook Broadway for Seventh avenue and she never got run over while crossing Herald square at Thirty-fourth street.

The young lady's usual plan on coming to the city was to take a Fourth avenue car at the Grand Central station and ride down to Thirty-third street. There she would leave the car, and walk across Thirty-fourth street to the great retail stores. She shopped an hour or two, and when ready to go home, she carried a little bundle with her. As she was going back to the train she saw a fine-looking man approaching. As he was about to pass her, Geraldine stopped dead still and appealed to him:

"I am in trouble and I wish your assistance."

The man lifted his hat and replied: "I shall be only too happy. What has happened to you?"

"Why—why," carrying her hand to her forehead, "something came over me all at once, and I can't tell you who I am or where I live. My memory seems to have gone all of a sudden!"

"It is a case of amnesia," he said. "I've heard of three or four cases of it this year, but there is nothing to be greatly alarmed about. In fact, I have had a touch of it myself, but was all right in a short while."

"But what shall I do?" she asked.

"Come into this store for a moment. The open street is hardly the place for a talk. Now then, you have evidently been shopping. Can you remember the stores you have just visited?"

"Not a one, though I may have visited half a dozen. I don't think there's anybody in any of the stores who knows me. I have no account with any of them."

"Well, let's see," he mused. "You came in this morning. That is—I suppose you live out of town somewhere?" he went on. "Haven't you got any of your address cards in your purse?"

Miss Geraldine opened her bag, and there was no cardcase.

"Now, try and think of the name of the town you live in," said the gentleman.

"If—if—I could think of the name of the town, I could tell you who I am," answered the victim.

"You came in on a train, didn't you?"

"Yes, I think I did, for I seem to remember a big station."

"And then you took the street car down here?"

"I believe I did."

"Well, you probably got off at Thirty-third street and it was only a short walk here. Then you went to the stores. You had finished your shopping and started back for Thirty-third street to go up town. You are going to get off at the Grand Central, probably, and there take a train for your home."

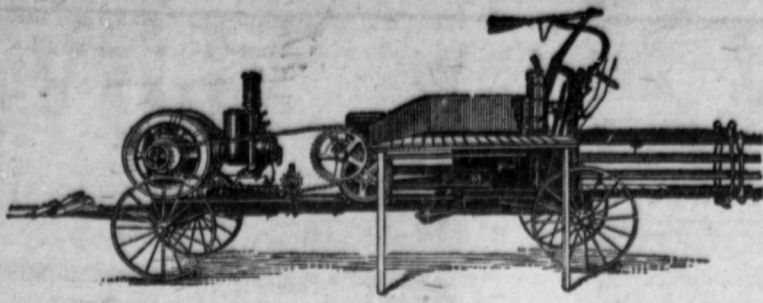

"I—I guess that was the way of it," said Miss Geraldine. "I will go up and see if I remember the station; but everything seems strange to me."

"Of course it does, and I shan't let you go up to the station alone. I will go with you, and we will see if we can't find the right train. Your memory will come back as suddenly as it went."

They walked along together. This was carrying the lark a good deal further than Miss Geraldine had planned for, but she must go through with it now. The best thing for her to do was to recover that lost memory of hers as soon as she could. They had no sooner arrived at the station, than everything came back to her, and she gave a little exclamation of delight. The gentleman was as glad as she was, but he didn't start right back for Thirty-fourth street. He saw her to the station and on to her train, and he lifted his hat in the nicest kind of way, and warmly shook her hand at parting. He was assured over and over again that her memory was all right, and he did just what you might expect a man to do. He took a seat in the car in the rear, and he rode up to Mount Vernon, or some other nice, small city and followed her at a respectful distance until she entered her mother's home.

And then what? And then Miss Geraldine didn't come to be an old maid. It was a lark, but it proved to be a happy one.

Origin of Health Drinking.

The custom of drinking the health of the most popular man at the table has its foundation in the ancient practice originated by the Greeks and adopted by the Romans of drinking to the gods and the dead, observes an exchange. The Greeks and Romans later began the practice of drinking to each other, and from this arose the custom of toasting living men. But health drinking in its modern form, originating in England in the roistering days of Charles II, begins with the custom of drinking to the ladies or to any woman who happened to be the reigning belle of the court. Many and various were the quaint customs associated with the toasts of those days. For example, in certain companies of military officers etiquette demanded that the cup should be passed from hand to hand. In many midnight gatherings of Alsatia, gallants stabbed themselves in the arms in order to drink with their blood the health of the woman on whom their hearts were set.

Where Do They Go?

"Where do all the pins go?" used to be a favorite speculative query, until people grew tired of guessing without coming to any conclusion. The inquiry might be widened to take in every movable object that can, by any possibility, be lost. What has become of the enormous stock of precious stones undoubtedly possessed by the rulers of the ancient world? Where are the treasures of the ancient world—the wonderful wealth of Solomon, for instance? These things have not become disintegrated; they are lost, and must, therefore, be in some crack or cranny of the earth's surface.

Mountains of Salmon.

The Skenna river boasts a great number of salmon canneries, and, next to the Fraser, is probably the largest center of this industry in British Columbia. On occasions when the fishing fleet comes in with a big catch, as many as 20,000 to 30,000 large salmon may be seen at one time in a rainbow-hued pile of sparkling beauty.

The Bittern.

The bittern mentioned in Isaiah 14:13; 24:31, and in Zephaniah 2:14, is a fowl about the size of the heron. It is mentioned as the symbol of desolation. Nineveh and Babylon became a possession of the bittern.

LIKE NOBODY IN HER SET

Remarkable Comment Made by Young Lady of Fashion on a Lecture by Dickens.

Chauncey M. Depew, the young octogenarian, tells the following:

"I once heard Dickens lecture. He had rare talents both as a speaker and as an actor. Micawber, Capt. Cuttle, Dick Sawyer—he gave inimitable impersonations of them all. I had for my companion a young lady, a leader in the fashionable set. 'How do you like it?' I said, entranced and delighted. 'Oh,' she remarked coldly, 'such common people are not in my set and I never expected to meet them.' Three husbands, a scandal and a divorce were her contributions to a novel of society.

"I also heard Thackeray deliver his lecture, 'The Four Georges.' He wanted to do everything that Americans did and when his host at a dinner had a plate of Saddle Rock oysters, each as large as his hand, put before him, Thackeray said, 'What am I to do with these?'

"'Eat them whole, our way,' suggested the host.

"Thackeray closed his eyes and, when the bivalve disappeared, remarked: 'I feel as if I had swallowed a baby.'"

QUEEN BY RIGHT OF MIGHT

Ruler of Cows in Rhone Valley, Switzerland, Must Prove Her Right to the Throne.

In the Rhone valley, Switzerland, an extraordinary ceremony is carried out every summer. This is the choosing of a queen cow by the cows themselves. A large number of cows are assembled in a field to choose their queen. The queen cow is the one which is strong enough to fight all the other cows off the pasture and remain in possession of it herself. The owners of the cows are not allowed to encourage their beasts in any way.

The honor of owning a queen cow is keenly coveted by the local herdsmen, and they do everything they can in order to turn their animal out a winner. In their eagerness to bring their beasts fit and well on the day of battle, many of the herdsmen feed on bread and wine. The cows descend from a fighting race, and are always eager to have a scrap. The "election" of the queen cow often lasts the greater part of the day, and is watched by crowds, who come to the scene from miles around.

CHILEANS FAVOR AMERICANS.

The young Chilean is rapidly absorbing American ideas of business and politics. The Union club, the most exclusive in Santiago, grants temporary membership to foreigners. The majority of these temporary members are Americans, for the English and Germans have their own clubs. Everywhere the American and Chilean are meeting with increased goodfellowship. Last year two young American engineers representing a great copper company gave a Washington's birthday dinner in Santiago, and all of the guests were Chileans. One of the Americans got into an argument with a Chilean over some point in revolutionary history. He found that the Chilean knew more about it than he did himself. For Washington and Lincoln are embodiments of national ideals to the Chileans no less than to ourselves. There is scarcely a town in Chile that has not its "calle Washington," and there are many statues of Washington in the larger cities.

IT'S A HABIT.

"I got this suit on Friday the 13th."

"Did it bring you bad luck?"

"Oh, no. I broke the hoodoo by not paying for the suit."

NATURAL TASTE.

"That prima donna has such a liquid voice."

"I suppose that is why the audience is drinking in her notes."

HOW IT STARTED.

"What do you think of my husband's friends?"

"I don't like to talk about other women, dear."

MARRIAGES.

Dulin--Kaye Nuptials.

Last Wednesday the home of Mr. and Mrs. George McKnight was the scene of a pretty autumn wedding, when their cousin, Miss Mary Kaye, was united in marriage to Mr. Warren Dulin. The house was beautifully decorated with chrysanthemums and smilax. Before the ceremony Mrs. Viola Radford charmingly sang At Dawning. She was accompanied by Mrs. Garrett Sallee, who also played the wedding march. The couple entered to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march and took their places under an improvised bower where they were met by the Rev. J. S. Morris, of Henderson, who performed the ceremony. During the ceremony Mrs. Sallee played Hymn.

The lovely bride was attired in a handsome blue broadcloth suit with black picture hat and gray shoes and gloves. She carried a shower bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley. The bride is one of the most popular and attractive girls of the county. She is a niece of Mr. Leslie Park and Mrs. E. C. Radford and is connected with other prominent families. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Dulin and is a successful farmer. Immediately after the ceremony the couple left for a short Southern trip.

Two Full Generals

With the $10,000 maximum insurance plan restored, as the administration urged, with an additional provision for raising Major General Pershing, commanding the American forces in France, and Major General Bliss, chief of staff, to the rank of general, the soldiers' and sailors' insurance bill, carrying an appropriation of $176,000,000, passed the senate unanimously.

Negro Assistant Secretary.

The nation's 10,000,000 negroes are to be represented in the war department during the war by Emmett J. Scott, for 18 years confidential secretary to Booker T. Washington. His appointment as special assistant secretary of war was announced by Secretary Baker.

But He Doesn't.

"De man dat brags," said Uncle Eben, "generally has sech good ideas of what a man ought to be dat you hopes he kin live up to 'em."

Timiskaming.

The name Timiskaming is from the word Timikaming of the Nipissing Indians, the intrusive letter "s" being due to Canadian French. It is derived from timiw, "it is deep," and gaming, "in the water," meaning in "the deep water." It is the name of the lake lying between northwestern Quebec and northwestern Ontario, and through it flows the Ottawa river. Near its western shore is the Cogalt district, famous for its rich silver mines. In places the waters of the lake are very deep, as the Indians evidently knew, for they gave it a name that means "in the deep water." A band of Algonquin Indians, known as the Timiskamings, and closely related to the Abitibi, once lived on the shore of the lake.

Cause of the Tides.

The urge of the mass of the moon on the water is three-fifths and that of the mass of the sun two-fifths. But this ratio varies with the complicated variations of distance of the moon from the earth, and earth from the sun.
